

The Security Institute Remembrance Lecture

Thursday 10th November 2011

The Security Institute invites you to attend their Annual Remembrance Lecture

Venue: Allan & Overy
One Bishops Square
London E1 6AD

Book

Price: £25 members & guests

Time: 18:00—21:00 hrs

Speaker: General Sir Jack Deverall KCB OBE
Formerly Commander-in-Chief
Allied Forces Northern Europe

About the Event

The Remembrance Lecture is a key event in the Security Institute calendar, when we pause to think about the efforts made on our behalf by the military, and raise money to support specially selected good causes.

The ticket price includes an excellent speaker and presentation from our chosen charity, supper, wine and soft drinks. There will also be a charity raffle, and you may donate prizes for this on the night.

Profit from this event will be split between Veterans Aid and PTSD Resolution

Speaker Topic: The Utility of Force

These are uncertain days for the Armed Forces. They are poorly structured and under resourced for today's conflicts. The economic crisis calls for greater priority in public spending. Neither Government nor the military seem to have clear idea over the nature of future war. Politicians appear confused as to value of hard power capabilities. They seem to favour the big programmes: Carriers, Deterrent, JSF, Type 26 Frigate at expense of UAVs, the Land component etc. Why is this?

What is the effect of all this uncertainty on the soldier, sailor and airman?
